Police later found that the copper wiring was sold at the Century Trading Post in Van Wert. The investigation led to the arrest of Andrew Stocklin and his brother Jeff Stocklin, who is presently spending a prison term for his part in the incident.
Andrew Stocklin was ordered to spend 60 days on electronic monitored house arrest and then spend another 30 days in the Van Wert County Jail at a time to be determined by his supervision officer. He must perform 200 hours of community service, pay one half of the restitution and will be under intensive supervision for a two year period. Stocklin must pay court costs, $250 as partial reimbursement for his court appointed attorney and $25 for the affidavit of indigency fee.
